The Tempo bench collection is designed for public interiors that require durable, adaptable seating with a clear architectural expression. Characterised by clean lines and a robust steel frame, the range is suitable for libraries, museums, learning environments, waiting areas, and hallways.

The collection includes both backless and backrest models, offering solutions for different levels of comfort and support while maintaining a consistent design language. A choice of material and upholstery options allows the benches to be tailored to a wide range of interior concepts.

With its understated form and careful detailing, the Tempo collection integrates naturally into contemporary public environments.
